A supersaturated solution is a more solute solution than can be dissolved by the solvent. If you haven't learned what a solute / solvent is, the material that is dissolved in the solution, such as salts
but not restricted to salts, is a solution.
The most popular example is sodium

Supersaturated Solution: Definition & Example - Video ...

A common example of a supersaturated solution is the carbonated beverage. These have much larger amounts of carbon dioxide dissolved than would be possible in normal conditions. The gas is kept dissolved by increased pressure, but immediately begins forming bubbles of released gas where the solution is in contact with its container once that pressure is released through opening the container.

What Is a Supersaturated Solution?

A supersaturated solution contains more solute at a given temperature than is needed to form a saturated solution. Increased temperature usually increases the solubility of solids in liquids. For example, the solubility of glucose at 25 °C is 91 g/100 mL of water. The solubility at 50 °C is 244 g/100 mL of water.

What is a supersaturated solution? + Example

A supersaturated solution is one that has more solute than it can hold at a certain temperature. Typically when the temperature of a solution is increased, more particles can be dissolved, thus increasing the amount of solute. A supersaturated solution goes through all of the steps listed above for the iced tea.

Saturated Solution Definition and Examples

This makes a saturated solution. Case three: if you heat the solution in case two, all the 12 spoons of sugar will dissolve in the solution. Then you can cool it down back to room temperature and see that this amount of water keeps 12 spoons of sugar dissolved, while you know that only 10 spoons can be kept. This makes a supersaturated solution.

Unsaturated vs Saturated vs Supersaturated solutions ...

For example, although sucrose can be recrystallised easily, its hydrolysis product, known as "invert sugar" or "golden syrup" is a mixture of glucose and fructose that exists as a viscous, supersaturated, liquid. Clear honey contains carbohydrates which may crystallize over a period of weeks.

Processed tea powders can be added to water to saturate the water. Protein powder could be used to create a saturated solution with milk, tea, or water. Laxative powders could saturate juice or water with which they are mixed. Cocoa powder could be mixed into water to the point of saturation.

Examples of Saturated Solution

A solution is said to be supersaturated when there is more dissolved solute as compared to a saturated solution. By precipitation or crystallization, the solute can easily fall out of the solution and so special conditions will be required in order to supersaturate a solution.
