So my first way of getting at a theology of art is that God is an artist. And then, secondly, I would say the Bible writers are artists. Maybe three-fourths of the Bible is crafted in some way linguistically that is poetic or striking or unusual. This obviously evidences some craft that is intended not merely to communicate a raw fact, but to ...

The mission of Art & Theology is to help the church rediscover its rich heritage in the visual, literary, and musical arts and to open it up to the activity of contemporary artists, whose giftings can enable us to see God in new and different ways. Art can enhance our spiritual perception, enrich our prayer lives, stimulate renewed engagement with the Bible, make us more empathetic, challenge our beliefs in a healthy way, and bring us into more intimate contact with the world.

About the Blog - Art & Theology

In Richard Viladesau's explanation, the communication of art is 'nonverbal, but... not for that reason pre-rational or pre-spiritual'. Art can actually be 'a way of thinking' theologically in and of itself, allowing us a qualitatively different understanding via image and symbol from the knowledge gained by ratiocination.

Art & Theology — Sarah Clarkson

Theology and the Arts explores, in a timely and engaging manner, several aspects of the relations between theology and aesthetics, in both the pastoral and academic realms. The underlying motif of this work is that beauty is a means of divine revelation, and that art is the human mediation that both enables and limits its revelatory power.
