People who have no filter don't know how to keep their thoughts, feelings, or emotions in. They blurt out the first thing that comes to their mind, without thinking about the consequences. They often hide behind the shield of their unwavering "honesty," but be careful not to confuse honesty with unpleasant, baseless, unsolicited judgment.

The term 'without a filter' is a pretty common one used today to describe a person who speaks without tact, seems to blurt out their thoughts or is generally seen as very blunt. The phrase comes from the idea that your mouth says what your brain thinks without consideration to the audience, situation or time.
