A phase-locked loop or phase lock loop is a control system that generates an output signal whose phase is related to the phase of an input signal. There are several different types; the simplest is an electronic circuit consisting of a variable frequency oscillator and a phase detector in a feedback loop. The oscillator generates a periodic signal, and the phase detector compares the phase of that signal with the phase of the input periodic signal, adjusting the oscillator to keep the phases mat

An improved architecture for all digital Delay Locked Loop (ADDLL) had been developed and implemented for several applications and design methodologies. In most cases it can be based on standard cells only. Several techniques are used to minimize the jitter, achieving less than 40pS (peak) for 0.13μ technology.
