The blackness in Othello is more obvious and has a higher presence every moment. In fact in an Othello film made in 1952 Othello's skin varied from lighter to darker depending in Othello's moral demeanor (Bartels, pg 148). The 2nd alternative would be that Othello was really black. Once again the question would be why would Shakespeare make the other characters call him a moor? No factor ...

Iago's manipulation of the handkerchief is the turning point in the film as well as in the play. The film illustrates the intensity of the trance and epilepsy Othello is feeling as he sees Bianca give the handkerchief to Cassio. But when Emilia gives Iago the handkerchief there is a difference from the play version.

Comparison Othello Play And Film English Literature Essay

- Iago uses the handkerchief to convince his master of his wife's betrayal; he turns Othello's reliance on actions over words against him
- he is unable to see that Iago has secret motivations. The sense of tragedy is heightened towards the climax of the play, as Othello prepares to kill Desdemona.
