Both nature and nurture. Parenting does play an important role, just not in the way we originally believed. Nature and nurture both play a role. How we act as parents as well as our child's genes are strongly intertwined (Duncan, 2014). Each child responds to parenting in different ways. We know that children bring out different responses from their caregivers, partly as a result of their genetic makeup.

Nature and Nurture in Child Development - Focus on the Family

Nature refers to how our genetic makeup affects our physical and mental health, while nurture refers to how our environment affects our physical and mental health. For example, if heart disease runs in your family, you can decrease your risk of developing the disease if you exercise and eat a healthy diet.

Nature vs. Nurture: Effects on Genes, Mental & Physical Health

In simplest terms, some scientists believe people behave as they do according to genetic predispositions or even "animal instincts," which is known as the "nature" theory of human behavior, while others believe people think and behave in certain ways because they are taught to do so. This is known as the "nurture" theory of human behavior.
