A clogged fuel filter means the petrol or diesel can't reach the engine which, unsurprisingly, means your engine won't be able to burn the fuel it needs to start. It will not be obvious if your fuel filter is blocked, but as a rule of thumb they should be changed every 15,000-20,000 miles so make sure you prevent this becoming an issue by getting the filter changed at the appropriate service times – consult your vehicle handbook for more information.
