The revelation of the cross is by the Spirit (nothing to do with the flesh), it is not baptism of the Spirit - the baptism comes before. Without the revelation of the cross it is difficult to understand the point of intimacy where all that spurs in you is readiness to be a martyr for Christ; in other words we cannot, without this revelation, say - it's all about you Jesus, and really ...

His EXceeding Abundance: The Revelation of the Cross

“The secret of the Encounters is the revelation of the Cross. The light of reconciliation starts to shine when this revelation has illuminated our soul, at the Cross, Jesus suffered in order for us to be reconciled to one another.” This line from the book captured me the most. Reconciliation is truly evident in the Encounter.

God revealed himself as merciful to humanity in the Incarnation, when he manifested himself in human flesh, and the supreme moment of that revelation was on the cross at Calvary. Indeed, Luther sometimes referred enigmatically to Christ crucified as "God's backside"—the point at which God appeared to be the very contradiction of all that one might reasonably have anticipated him to be.

The cross in Revelation is redemptive, purchasing for God a kingdom and priests from every nation; it is liberating as it sets us free from sin; it is victorious as it dethrones every power of evil; it is exemplary as the ultimate expression of the faithful witness to which we are all called; and it fulfils every purpose God has for his people and his creation.

The answer is actually obvious. The norm and criterion of the Christian Bible is the biblical Christ. Christ is the standard by which we measure everything else in the Bible. Since Christianity claims Christ as the image and revelation of God, then God is violent if Christ is violent, and God is nonviolent if Christ is nonviolent.
