IMPLEMENTING STRATEGY.

Strategy is the Structure. The sum total of how an organization goes about its work is its strategy. Structure and strategy are married to each other. When a company makes major changes, it must carefully think out every aspect of the structure required to support the strategy. That is the only way to implement lasting improvements.

Developing strategies is the fourth step in the VMOSA (Vision, Mission, Objectives, Strategies, and Action Plans) process outlined at the beginning of this chapter. Developing strategies is the essential step between figuring out your objectives and making the changes to reach them.

Chapter 8. Developing a Strategic Plan | Section 4 ...

Structure follows strategy is a business principle that states that the divisions, departments, teams, processes and technology of an organization are designed to achieve a firm's strategy. This may seem obvious but in practice the opposite often happens. For example, a technology department may develop strategies for technology implementations simply because that's what technology departments do.

What is Structure Follows Strategy? - Simplifiable

1. Alignment with business strategy. One of an L&D executive's primary tasks is to develop and shape a learning strategy based on the company's business and talent strategies. The learning strategy seeks to support Strategy-Structure Alignment is strategy-driven and performance-oriented. It begins with a reaffirmation (and sometimes recalibration) of business strategy, explores the implications of that strategy for organizational structure, considers changing conditions in the environment, and through diagnosis identifies organizational problems and performance gaps.

Strategy And Structure in Organizations

Organizational Strategy, Structure, and Process focuses on how organizations adapt to their environments. The book introduced a theoretical framework composed of a dynamic adaptive cycle and an empirically based strategy typology showing four different types of adaptation.
