My wife got a 2005 Mazda 6 with a stock Bose system. It's a nice little car. I have a 1995 conversion van with a Franken-crap system in it that I slapped together with stuff I could afford at the time, a Sony head, couple 300w off-brand amps, couple old school JBL 12s, some Pioneer 2- and 3- ways here and there.

Since the standard audio system in the wagon comes with BlueTooth phone / audio, voice activation of the phone, 6-speakers, 6-disc in-dash CD changer, etc, that was going to be a ridiculous amount to pay for an integrated SatNav. (True, the audio would be better which would be nice, but I can certainly live with standard audio.)
