The immune system is made up of specialized organs, cells, and tissues that all work together to destroy these invaders. Some of the main organs involved in the immune system include the spleen, lymph nodes, thymus, and bone marrow. How does it work? The immune system develops all kinds of cells that help to destroy disease causing microbes.

Biology for Kids: Immune System

he immune system is a network of cells, tissues*, and organs that work together to defend the body against attacks by “foreign” invaders. These are primarily microbes (germs)—tiny, infection-causing organisms such as bacteria, viruses, parasites, and fungi. Because the human body provides an ideal environment for many microbes, they try to break in.

There are three kinds of immunity:
Passive: Passive immunity is a temporary immunity that comes from another body, such as from the mother through the placenta or breast milk.

Passive immunity typically disappears 6 to 12 months after birth. Innate: Innate immunity is the immunity you were born with.
